Western leaders are figureheads dependent on wealthy donors who "do not care about their people," Belarusian President Alexander Lukashenko has said in an interview with RT's Rick Sanchez.

Speaking at the presidential palace in Minsk, Lukashenko discussed the Western political system, Belarus' relations with neighboring countries, US President Donald Trump, and a Leaders like French President Emmanuel Macron and German Chancellor Friedrich Merz “are all just temporary placeholders... They’re here today, gone tomorrow,” Lukashenko, who has been in power since 1994 and is Europe’s longest-serving current leader, said.

“They’re just trying to grab something while they can. That’s the foundation of their policies,” he added, while highlighting his own style of governance.

“I appoint the government, supervise its work, and bear responsibility for the outcomes,” Lukashenko said. He argued that in the West, “it’s not clear who appoints who and who’s responsible for what... the people there don’t know who they can hold accountable.”

The Belarusian leader said Western politicians owe their positions to “rich donors who finance them,” and “over time, they begin to prioritize the interests of these donors, not the people of Germany, France, or the UK.”

Mr Lukashenko is quite right, but no "leader" cares a fig for any of those who were fooled into granting them power to lead. Perhaps it's worst in the West, and there is a gradation of evil, but the whole nature of every government is parasitic.

What is wisdom? What is truth? What is even factual, or accurate? A person who has some knowledge of his own history and workings and character will often feel something literally in his spine, that ancient lizard spine, where one knows that one is listening to and in the presence of «the truth.» One has that sense with Lukashenko, with President Putin as well, where what one is hearing aligns with facts and experience, where things being said somehow 'add up,' that they make sense. It was the great philosopher Ludwig Wittgenstein who said that «the truth is everything that is the case.» Logic dictates that things add up, that they make sense, that they are 'the case.' As Wordsworth said of poetry, so it should be with politics, the language of men speaking to men, of people talking to people. This United States needs to return to that plain-speaking truth-telling. We must also return to listening, to studying the news broadly, to seeing other people and civilizations for who they are. This Lukashenko interview is most valuable for

"Western leaders 'don't care about their people' – Lukashenko to RT's Rick Sanchez"

It is because they are not 'their people'. The leaders are zionists, loyal to global zionazis, not to their constituents. The zionists are their people.

Citizens of the west think that their leaders care enough about them to let them vote, as if ballot papers will enable them to live better. Must be true enough fir them to do it 4 years after four years for generations!
