The Russian Foreign Ministry earlier confirmed Araghchi’s visit. Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov said Putin has a meeting with the Iranian diplomat on his schedule.

The trip marks the final leg of Araghchi’s regional tour of Pakistan, Oman, and Russia, which he has described as an effort to “closely coordinate” with partners amid the standoff with Washington and West Jerusalem.

In Pakistan, he shared Tehran’s position on a “workable framework to permanently end the war on Iran,” adding that it remains to be seen whether the US is “truly serious about diplomacy.”

In Oman, Araghchi said discussions focused on bilateral matters and regional developments, including ways to ensure safe transit in the Strait of Hormuz, which he described as a matter of interest to littoral states, regional neighbors, and the wider world.

US President Donald Trump's envoys, Steve Witkoff and Jared Kushner, were reportedly on standby to fly to Pakistan for potential negotiations over the weekend, but Tehran rejected direct talks with US representatives during Araghchi's tour.

However, Araghchi reportedly handed Pakistan, which is acting as mediator, a document intended for Washington outside the formal negotiating process. The document outlines Iran's "red lines," including issues related to Hormuz and Iran's nuclear energy program.

Washington indefinitely extended the ceasefire with Iran earlier this week, expecting a "unified" proposal from Tehran while keeping a US blockade of Iranian ports in place. The standoff around the Strait of Hormuz has rattled global markets, pushing Brent crude above $100 per barrel, while Trump has made it clear that there is no firm timeline for ending the war.

The US president further raised the stakes by saying he ordered the US Navy to "shoot and kill" any Iranian boats found laying mines in the waterway. Tehran considers the blockade a direct breach of the ceasefire and has argued that any talks are pointless as long as it remains in place and Israel continues its attacks against Lebanon.

Russia wants the Trump Strait to remain closed, enjoying the higher oil prices. Iran will not get any help from Russia to re- open it.

Trump needs to explain how the US navy can «shoot and kill» Iranian gunboats found laying mines, when the US is not willing to risk any of its warships being stationed closer than 700 kilometers from the Strait of Hormuz.

Trump just cannot accept a simple 'NO,' and will keep making up like he alone controls the call for negotiations with Iran to begin. He doesn't, and has so far been making up stories to make it seem like he does; he has so far only been 'negotiating' with an imaginary Iran in his own and his entire administration's heads. Trump's has been talking to himself in his tweets.
