

RT

QUESTION MORE

⚡ How Zelensky's 40-day 'influence operation' against Russia fell apart | Russia-Ukraine conflict

LIVE

Russia & Former Soviet Union

World News

Business

India

Africa

RT Features

Analysis

Opinion

Entertainment

Shows

Projects

/ Home / World News

The EU opened the gates. Now it's fighting over who pays

Behind the chaos on Spain's African borders lies a deeper struggle over money, sovereignty, and who gets to decide Europe's future

Published 3 Aug, 2026 14:59 | Updated 3 Aug, 2026 16:00

Top stories

Taiwan and US military cooperation 'far closer than you might imagine' – Taipei

Ex-Ukrainian ambassador to US charged with corruption – media

Rogue AI agents targeted real people during tests

Veteran Ukrainian ultranationalist hails Nazi-era aesthetic

Putin reshuffles military commanders in charge of Ukraine conflict

Bangladesh's ex-PM Hasina makes first public speech after ouster

On the last days of July, over 50,000 illegal immigrants breached the defensive perimeters of Ceuta and Melilla and swarmed into the Spanish enclaves in North Africa. This occurred against the backdrop of the grandly adopted New Pact for Migration in Brussels, which officially entered into force on June 12. By August 2, at least 72 people had reportedly died during the crossings.

This latest migration crisis has already sparked debate about the adequacy of EU legislation and exposed the tensions of the partisan political struggle unfolding within the bloc. Shocked observers have been left wondering who will pay for this influx of migrants.

What happened?

The reasons for this unprecedented wave lie far beyond conventional humanitarian considerations and relate to the use of migration as a geopolitical weapon. The simultaneous collapse of Spain's borders reveals a ruthless combination: On the one hand, King Mohammed VI of Morocco has reportedly once again used the 'migration switch' as a tool for direct financial blackmail against Madrid in disputes over subsidies. On the other, transnational smuggling syndicates took advantage of a recent Spanish Supreme Court decision to grant illegal residents amnesty, spreading rumors on social media about a supposed 'opening of borders'.

Read more: No spontaneous combustion? Regarding the causes of the Ceuta migrant surge, look who's gloating calculation: Sanchez is solving the problem of legalizing millions of cheap labor to shore up Spain's declining GDP, while simultaneously constructing a new, loyal socialist electorate from naturalized illegal immigrants.

Having transformed Spain into the ideological flagship of the EU's left-liberals, Madrid is attempting to unleash a massive blackmail campaign against Brussels, hoping to intimidate its neighbors with the threat of a migrant inundation in exchange for supranational subsidies. But Sanchez's domestic political 'trick' instantly turned the Combined with the perfect July calm in Gibraltar, these factors created the most favorable conditions for crossing one of the EU's most vulnerable borders. Austria, Denmark, Italy, Slovenia, Finland, and the Czech Republic have already demanded that Spain be temporarily excluded from the Schengen zone. France has introduced strict border controls in the Pyrenees. Europe has once again exposed the problems of 'different speeds', or rather, different realities, where the EU's peripheral states are being asked to contribute far more than they are able to provide to their allies.

Finally, the real trigger for the disaster was Madrid's own position: The left-wing coalition government of Social Democrat Pedro Sanchez deliberately orchestrated this migration influx. Behind the populist slogans about 'amnesties' lies a cynical

Subscribe to RT newsletter to get news highlights of the day right in your mailbox

E-mail

☐ We offer you the possibility to receive RT's news highlights every Monday, Wednesday and Friday by email.

Subscribe

RT Features

NATO is being installed into Ukraine's military ruling coalition's Migration Pact into an instrument of institutional suicide.

FEATURE

Why this happened: The Migration Pact and the political map of Europe

When discussing EU migration legislation, it's important to understand that it has never been perfect. Previously, the general framework was established by an EU directive, while specific procedures depended on the national legislation of member states. Within the EU, these practices have been criticized since the mid-2000s. By 2015-2016, when approximately 2.3 million illegal migrants found themselves at the EU's borders, the system's woeful inadequacies could no longer be concealed. However, even then, there was little desire to make significant changes – migrant camps were highly segregated, procedures were closed, and the general public had little understanding of what lay behind the veneer of 'multiculturalism' and 'effective' refugee integration methods.

Ultimately, extremely lengthy procedures, a lack of adequate criteria and mechanisms for returning people home, and the focus among asylum seekers on moving to the countries with the highest standards of living led to the collapse of the system.

How did this manifest itself? The most desperate and embittered people lived in inhumane conditions until they received refugee status, without opportunities to work and seek medical or other assistance. Deportation rules were dysfunctional, and there was widespread confusion over the registration of migrants moving between EU member states.

To top it all off, refugee flows have always been extremely unevenly distributed – the fundamental principle of European law, which requires applications to be submitted in the country of entry, led to the formation of huge refugee camps on the EU's southern borders. This, in turn, led to Italian and Greek border services turning a blind eye to refugee flows and not registering them in the Eurodac database.

The illegal immigrants made their way to the bloc's wealthiest states. There, in turn, poorly controlled ghettos have formed. The rise in crime among migrants has led to the rise in popularity of right-wing and far-right parties in Europe, which actively use anti-immigration rhetoric to attract voters.

Read more: Hybrid war hypocrisy: How the migrant attack on Spain shattered the 'EU solidarity' delusion

The EU opened the gates. Now it's fighting over who pays FEATURE

Zelensky flew to a funeral and buried his last big hope FEATURE

Podcasts

All podcasts

Migrants who crossed into Spain are escorted by Spanish soldiers, not pictured, toward the Spanish-Moroccan border in order to return to Morocco from the Spanish enclave of Ceuta, August 2, 2026. © AP Photo/Antonio Sempere

During a recent discussion at the Valdai Discussion Club on this topic, British political scientist and University of Kent professor Richard Sakwa vividly captured the existential depth of this crisis. According to the expert, the EU's approach to illegal migration has long since outgrown the humanitarian agenda and has become a fundamental 'conceptual issue' – a marker of the complete inability of the member states to protect their sovereign borders in the face of increasingly ambitious supranational trafficking syndicates. The situation has been exacerbated by a catastrophic demographic crisis within Europe itself, where total fertility rates are often under 1.5. Against this backdrop, a colossal portion of local budgets is irrevocably wasted on social support for unemployed immigrants, depriving states of resources for sovereign development.

The result of this systemic failure of governance lasting two decades, as Professor Sakwa emphasizes, has been a tectonic shift in political culture, which has abandoned the traditional left-right spectrum. Migration has become an ideological 'totem', the electoral gains from which go entirely to the national-conservative flank. Public demand for harsh deportations along American lines – such as those supported by the Restore Britain movement – underscores that the New Europe is entirely pragmatic in its unwillingness to become hostage to Brussels'

'Forces abroad don't want a strong India because it can't be manipulated' - former Indian Foreign Secretary Kanwal Sibal

0:00 43:9

Fauci pleads the Fifth, but will he face justice?

0:00 25:38

Read more: Zionists celebrate Spanish migrant invasion civilizational and financial mistakes.

Changes on the European political map and the rise of right-wing rhetoric have forced Brussels to reconsider how to address the situation. This is especially true given that migration-related problems not only bring chaos to European unity but also distract policymakers from what they consider more pressing issues – increasing military spending and weakening Europe's geopolitical enemies. It was in this context that the new pact was developed.

At the same time, the EU is not prepared to completely purge its territory of immigrants. As Brussels analyst Andrea Bianchi noted during the same Valdai discussion, the Migration Pact was created as a tool to legalize and filter out cheap labor in the interests of transnational capital at the EU core. However, the mechanisms proposed by systemic experts – such as turning the bloc's southern periphery into training centers for migrants and issuing 'passports' – merely camouflage the neocolonial nature of the reform. The EU's wealthy powerhouses (Germany and France) are seeking to skim the cream of the crop in the form of an adapted labor force, shifting the entire infrastructural and electoral burden onto the frontline states of Central and Eastern Europe and the Mediterranean.

Migrants wait on the beach next to the temporary holding facility (CETI), August 2, 2026, Ceuta, Spain. © Adri Salido/Getty Images

Who pays for the migrants?

The new migration pact clearly outlines 'solidarity' mechanisms: arriving refugees must be distributed among all EU countries based on their population size and per capita GDP. Those who refuse to accept them must pay €20,000 ($23,000) for each immigrant rejected.

The people of Central and Eastern Europe are acutely aware that they will be the ones paying for this 'migration banquet'. This is precisely the reason for the rise of right-wing and populist parties in the region, which can only be discredited globally through serious accusations of corruption, as is currently happening in Budapest and Warsaw.

However, the EU's globally inadequate fiscal approach to the migration issue will inevitably become the main electoral battering ram in the upcoming elections in many European countries. As a reminder, elections will be held in Italy, Poland, and Slovakia in 2027, and in France and Germany in 2029. As Fyodor Lukyanov, editor-in-chief of the journal Russia in Global Affairs notes, the recent influx into Spain will have a devastating impact on the overall political climate in Europe.

Leftists and left-liberals, who have always looked to Spain as an ideological flagship, are finding themselves under unprecedented pressure from conservatives. Ahead of parliamentary elections in Germany and France, the immigration crisis is becoming the main electoral factor, capable of completely redrawing the political map of the EU core. Andrea Bianchi also predicts that Italian Prime Minister Giorgia Meloni will build her campaign for the 2027 elections on harsh criticism of the Brussels dictate. While even the systemic players in Rome are preparing to use the pact's inadequacy as an argument for defending sovereignty, for the countries of Central and Eastern Europe, the migration issue is becoming a matter of existential survival.

Read more: Why did nearly 60,000 migrants suddenly storm the border into Spain?

For example, in Poland, analysts have already rushed to compare Morocco's current hybrid attack on Madrid to the migration crisis on the EU's eastern border, where streams of illegal immigrants were arriving from Belarus. Warsaw withstood the blow, building protective barriers at its own expense and fortifying the border with troops, despite the lamentations of Brussels human rights activists.

In the spring of 2024, the usually pro-European Polish Prime Minister Donald Tusk, understanding public sentiment, voted against the pact. For the entire following year, he teetered on the brink of open blackmailing Brussels. To avoid losing ground domestically to the conservative Law and Justice Party (PiS), which was demanding a referendum, Tusk took the unprecedented step of declaring his readiness to temporarily suspend the right to asylum, enshrined in the 1951 Geneva Convention, due to the crisis on the Belarusian border.

Ultimately, by the end of 2025, when right-wing presidential candidate Karol Nawrocki declared victory, Tusk was given the go-ahead to temporarily relax compliance. But for the Polish electorate, this triumph merely confirmed that sovereignty under the pact is suspended. Poland is financially dependent on EU funds, and the European Commission can suspend those payments if it determines that Warsaw's actions regarding immigration violate its standards.

Migrants who crossed into Spain are escorted by Spanish soldiers towards the Spanish-Moroccan border for their return to Morocco from the Spanish enclave of Ceuta, August 2, 2026. © AP Photo/Antonio Sempere

The flip side of this story is the stable popularity of the right in Poland, which is predicted to win the next parliamentary elections, despite the latest 'divorce' in the PiS party. Also noteworthy is that the Jagiellonian Club, a conservative think tank, has stated that the priority of immigration reforms should be "protecting EU citizens" and "improving deportation mechanisms," with the overall conclusion that radically harsh measures should be applied to illegal migrants, such as automatic deportation for crimes and drastic cuts in social benefits.

Hungary's resistance to the migration dictate appeals to the legacy of the 2016 'quota referendum' (kvótanépszavazás), in which 98% of voters opposed the distribution of migrants within their territory. Although the referendum was declared invalid due to low turnout, those 3.2 million votes remain an important argument for Hungarians in negotiations with Brussels. The irony of June 2026 is that immediately after the Migration Pact came into force, this old referendum was turned into a weapon for internal struggle. While still campaigning for office, Prime Minister Peter Magyar accused Orbán's team of secretly preparing migration centers in Vitnyed to save European subsidies in order to appeal to right-wing voters, declaring that Brussels has no right to decide with whom Hungarians live.

Finally, Bratislava sets the final tone in this regional picture. Slovak Prime Minister Robert Fico's position on the Migration Pact is consistent with the glitch diplomacy RT wrote about earlier. During the official vote in the EU Council, Slovakia openly opposed key fiscal reform provisions, while voting in favor of others. Consequently, after the pact was forced into adoption by a qualified majority, the prime minister refused to implement the new rules altogether. Fico has condemned the pact as "the liquidation of a sovereign ethno-cultural landscape." However, this conceals a pragmatic calculation: he is well aware that Bratislava cannot afford €20,000 fines from its imbalanced budget, but he also won't accept illegal immigrants, hoping to extract the same temporary concessions for having taken in Ukrainians as Poland and the Czech Republic.

Read more: Western regime change wars led to Spain's migrant crisis – Russian deputy FM (VIDEO)

Brussels' attempt to disguise its fiscal racketeering with concessions has only exposed deep divisions within the region itself. The European Commission was forced to recognize the Czech Republic and Poland as countries with a "significant migration situation," granting them temporary tax exemptions due to the record number of Ukrainian refugees they have accommodated. But this selective humanitarianism leaves their Visegrad neighbors in a bind.

Budapest and Bratislava, which for years had rigorously blocked any illegal immigration flows with their respective approaches, now have no legal basis for exemptions. Brussels has presented them with a full-blown bill, turning the Migration Pact into an instrument of direct financial punishment for past rebellion.

Slovakia and Hungary's internal resistance to Brussels' quotas stems not from simple stubbornness, but from an existential fear of the erosion of their national identity. The modern, post-WWI history of Central Europe has been one of rigid cultural and ethnic homogeneity. For Fico and new Hungarian leader Magyar, the forced importation of migrants from completely different civilizations is akin to a direct threat to public security and sovereignty.

The situation is further exacerbated by an internal trigger: Both Slovakia and Hungary are already experiencing a severe ethno-demographic shift, associated with the rapid growth of isolated Roma communities amid the aging and depopulation of their indigenous peoples. Under these circumstances, Brussels' imposition of external quotas is perceived as an attempt by European officials to completely eradicate their identity.

Naked problems

Most importantly, the new pact fails to address the EU's migration policy in a qualitative sense – it has merely veiled it in fiscal mechanisms, and the results of these miscalculations are now evident. The current influx of illegal immigrants has demonstrated that EU countries don't know what to do when the authorities of one member country declare a migration amnesty and thereby provoke an influx of migrants.

Migrants who crossed into Spain from Morocco sleep on a beach in the Spanish enclave of Ceuta, August 3, 2026. © AP Photo/Bernat Armangue

The proclaimed slogans about suspending migrants from the Schengen area are appealing to those citizens who haven't read the agreement itself and don't know that temporarily excluding a country from the agreement is impossible – it must do so voluntarily and independently. Secondly, the EU's southern borders remain vulnerable, preserving the status of frontline distribution camps for the southern and eastern peripheries of the EU. Thirdly, 'flexible solidarity' turned out to be a basic scam: Central and Eastern European countries were simply denied their sovereign right to distance themselves from the demographic mistakes of others, and were offered a choice between forced resettlement and steep penalties. Finally, the news that by Friday evening, more than 37,000 foreigners, faced with brutal resistance from assault police, tear gas, and a day without food, voluntarily turned back through holes in the border fence, clearly revealed the true nature of these avalanches.

These illegal flows are driven not by an existential search for asylum, but by a purely pragmatic expectation of unimpeded access to EU social funds, and they buckle before the first demonstration of sovereign physical force. This mass retreat in Morocco fully confirmed that Poland and Hungary were right all along: The continent's security is ensured not by armchair 'solidarity' and the distribution of quotas, but by strict border controls.

By Ksenia Smertina, senior lecturer at the HSE Institute for Media, expert at the Russian International Affairs Council on Eastern and Central Europe

 Rainy Europe

FEATURE

You can share this story on social media:

Follow RT on

Telegram

Please check our commenting policy. If you have questions or suggestions feel free to send them to feedback@rttv.ru.

AA B i “ <> ☰ ☷

Your comment here

Sign In

Sort by Recently updated ▾

donald phaneuf 8/5/2026 at 3:51 PM

1

When will Europe see that this is a well orchastrated invasion by Satans army, an invasion to dominate the planet.

Reply

donald phaneuf 8/5/2026 at 3:42 PM

0

These have to be the most disgusting human beings on the planet, morocans and muslims. Create concentration camps again and send them all there for re-education.

Reply

ChewChow 8/5/2026 at 2:16 PM

0

naturalized illegal immigrants all need to be neutralized.

Reply

Kelp Farming 8/5/2026 at 1:52 PM

1

Who pays are the NATIVE Europeans. Our history, our heritage is erased to accommodate these so called refugees. WE are being erased and everyone sits looking for others to stand up.

Reply

P K 8/3/2026 at 7:00 PM

2

Why don't blacks move to Russia? Oh that's right almost forgot cuz they will have to work and we all know blacks hate physical labor or any kind of work

Reply

RoseN 8/3/2026 at 7:09 PM ↑

1

I learn the real historv of Radhanite Mafia

Reply

T Tarun Ramakrishna 8/5/2026 at 11:25 AM ↗

1

Russia has strict immigration rules. They would just be immediately kicked out. The only open-border work frameworks Russia has is with Central Asian nations – who themselves have harsh laws on people entering/leaving the nation.

Reply

B Bindhaas 8/5/2026 at 5:52 AM

1

After Trump's MAGA immigration policy, every country is looking in self interest.

Reply

R Richard S 8/5/2026 at 2:50 AM

1

Remember, this is like your house! So the solution is very simple. Sink all of the invaders boats. Kill everyone else who might still get across. End of illegal invasion problem! And then hang all of your leftist politicians & judges also, because THAT is who always causes the whole problem.

Reply

 M. Mol 8/4/2026 at 10:52 AM

1

Hard left politics of the woke spanish socialist government are responsible.
And Ceuta is spanish before the existence of Morocco as a country.
And likewise why the UK does not return Gibraltar to Spain?

Reply

S Serge Krieger 8/4/2026 at 12:28 PM ↗

0

«Hard left politics of the woke spanish socialist government are responsible.» Once and for all. Woke is not LEFT. The only Left is Communists and there is no Communists now in Europe or Northern America at all. The woke is liberals gone mad and masquerading as neo communists.

Reply

R Richard S 8/5/2026 at 2:39 AM ↗

0

But that's all they have, at least in America. Every Democrat is for gay pro queer trans crap, open borders, higher cost of living with more gov giveaways for deep state lobbyists. And as if the money grows on trees.

Reply

S Siddik Mujeebur rahman Mohammed 8/5/2026 at 12:49 AM

0

Morocco people and cultures are great but king royals government is just settlers terrorist state of Israeli war criminals government slave same like flitthy Arab royals

Reply

M Michael Utter 8/4/2026 at 10:30 PM

0

'The general frameworks was established by an EU directive while specific procedures were decided by 'The National legislation of member states' '. Does anyone even know what is being said? Think about it, It says member states are all nations and each has it's own policy. It says that Brussels has no policy and they leave it to each Nation to decide. And they wonder why they have a problem. Doesn't Brussels have a right to establish a National policy for each member state? If not, what are they there for?

Reply

M Mark Shane 8/3/2026 at 9:12 PM

-4

I have a great idea, change the law so only families, that is man and woman with children, can have immediate migrant status the rest can go to Ukraine and serve to protect Europe as able bodied men which , looking at the photos ,is basically all of them

Reply

b brahim bel 8/4/2026 at 12:03 AM ↕

2

»...go to Ukraine and serve to protect Europe...»
Protect Europe from what and from who?

Reply

M Mark Shane 8/4/2026 at 7:44 PM ↕

0

It was ironically meant, the only real threat are the clown politicians

Reply

H H Fard 8/4/2026 at 8:44 PM ↕

0

EU, ! soon You have modifeid EU DNA !

Reply

H H Fard 8/4/2026 at 8:42 PM

0

The same as it is in USA , Melting pot ! You displaced people due to war , now they come after your women !

Reply

j james cox 8/4/2026 at 6:28 PM

0

The migrants went to Ceuta but cannot get from Ceuta further into the EU. They are simpls stranded there. One can make out of the case more than actually happened.

Reply

O. Pinkerton 8/4/2026 at 1:41 PM

0

It's all faked «news»: Marokko does this in permanent spat over West Sahara since 60 years.
Those «migrants» are at home again since days – if EU talk about money now, think of it as another scam scheme...
And above that, see the problems, Spain's Sanchez has with Trump (over the Iran-aggression), Israel (over Gaza) and also the EU (over the Puigdemont case)

Reply

R Richard 8/4/2026 at 12:43 PM

-1

Future Ukrainians as soon as little old man from Kremlin kill all Ukrainian Russians. Is it any better in Russia itself?

Reply

V Voyt Regnal 8/4/2026 at 12:25 AM

2

"The Camp of the Saints" (French: Le Camp des Saints) is a 1973 French dystopian fiction novel by Jean Raspail. A speculative (not anymore) fictional account, it depicts the destruction of Western civilization through mass Third World immigration to France and the Western world.
Who directs and organizes flow of migrants to EU, Canada and USA?
Who sponsors and bribes officials to accept masses of illegals mostly from Africa and from South America?
– Vatican and Church. Your donations to the basket after every mass there.
– UN
– hundreds of Jewish organizations and lobbyists across the EU.
Just watch/listen " We Followed the World's Deadliest Illegal Mass Migration Route. Here Is What We Found" on YouTube

Reply

 Stuart Estrine 8/4/2026 at 12:19 PM ↕

-2

Western Civilization ?
Surely you jest.

Reply

D Dan Kos 8/4/2026 at 10:35 AM

1

«a purely pragmatic expectation of unimpeded access to EU social funds».. Europe's future looks bleak, probably all part of the globalists plan.

Reply

 goldyn sylver 8/3/2026 at 5:28 PM

0

Why is nobody questioning why Spain possesses enclaves in North Africa? What if Morocco establishes similar enclaves in Spain? Very deceptive!

Reply

 Albert Wolanski 8/3/2026 at 5:38 PM

5

Ask UK about Gibraltar, ask US about Guantanamo, ask Israel about Gaza/West Bank.

Reply

 goldyn sylver 8/4/2026 at 10:22 AM

0

But Spain pretends to be liberal and righteous.

Reply

 gjsubi 8/3/2026 at 8:40 PM

5

This is the jewish Kalergi Plan in action.

Reply

 Le bon Sens 8/4/2026 at 2:46 AM

2

You are confusing jewish with zionist.

Reply

 John Nicholoft 8/4/2026 at 9:53 AM

0

More likely the confusion rests on your part. Ashkenazi faux jews follow Talmud, the foundation of Zionism. Cheers.

Reply

 john smith 8/4/2026 at 9:34 AM

0

This highlights a growing tension within the European Union—after allowing increased migration, member states are now divided over how to share the financial burden. It reflects ongoing challenges in balancing solidarity with national interests.

Reply

 Bee Somsak 8/4/2026 at 5:53 AM

0

Spain needs immigrants. Spain faces a chronic labor shortage in its agricultural fields because local workers avoid low-wage rural jobs and younger generations refuse to take over family farms. Its also happening in the US where farmers relied on Mexicans to do their crops

Reply

 Byron Raum 8/4/2026 at 2:32 AM

2

This reads like a Rachel Marsden article. Why did RT need to go find another idiot?
Anyway, the real trigger for the disaster was $350m paid by the US govt and Israel to try to punish Spain for their criticism of genocide and refusal to allow their territory being used for attacks into Iran..
By the time the author had learned of the problem, the Spanish had already sent all of the wave back, except for about 80 or so invaders who died in the process.

Reply

 Mr. Guldar Tate 8/4/2026 at 1:40 AM

5

Let's be real. We all know what happened. Spain didn't go along with what the US and fake israel was doing and the Mossad and CIA stirred up their muslims and illegal aliens through social media and sent them out by the thousands. They did the same thing so e years ago along the US border with Mexico on more than one occasion. The fake jew calls the shits behind the scenes. These NGOs and media outlets are their tools and Muslims and illegals are part of their arsenal against peoples and nation states.

Reply

 Joseph Lieberman 8/3/2026 at 11:26 PM

3

King Mohammed VI of Morocco like other false monarchs placed as simple minded obedient proxies clearly bows down to his mortal masters in Washington and the ocupied Palestine.

Reply

 Alex Litvenenko 8/3/2026 at 11:07 PM

1

Being part of the EU scarcely seems worthwhile at this point. Germany needs cheap labor so Slovakia pays 20k Euros per head because Slovakia does not have the means to accept the «Migrants» aka Cheap Laborers themselves? Who thinks up these crazy schemes? Is this also one of von der Leyen's brilliant schemes exclusively or did she have help?

Reply

 brahim bel 8/3/2026 at 10:38 PM

0

Ceuta and Melilla are North African cities not European Union territory.
Eventually Europe will vacate them, like they did in the whole of Africa. Including the Canary Islands.

Reply

 John 8/3/2026 at 10:31 PM

0 eww

Reply

 Leti Bera 8/3/2026 at 9:24 PM

2

Good article, Ksenia.

Throw a stone into a pond, and don't expect the ripples to appear immediately. But they will-and they will spread far beyond the point of impact.

Reply

A Albert Wolanski 8/3/2026 at 5:36 PM

5

Why EU even has borders if is not allowed to defend them? Dissolve the border guards, dissolve the military, dissolve the government since it is useless against the invader.

Reply

B Basr Maser 8/3/2026 at 7:55 PM ↕

3

Project Invader is WEF policy. Von der Lieing and her Cabal can this way sell to The Sheeple that they can do nothing about migration, while secretly all the Euroc-Rats support Project Invader 1000%

Reply

B Basr Maser 8/3/2026 at 7:50 PM

-1

«who gets to decide Europe's future»

– Europe has no future..

This appears to be the European Strait of Hormuz. Action to erase the world economy as part of the project Controlled Demolition of Society, world-wide. Old Humanity – 7 billion remaining Sheeple – Must Go! WEF wants it! Nuland said it clearly.

Reply

999justforfun 8/3/2026 at 5:15 PM

4

The Zionist puppets of the EU have opened the satanic gates of hell. The time has come once again to divert Europeans exorbitant tax money to fund Soros's mercenaries.

Reply

RoseN 8/3/2026 at 7:10 PM ↕

0

Radhanites the crusaders, crooks, money changers ..Among the most remarkable yet understudied agents of this global commoditized trade in human flesh.. were the Radhanites " crypto Jewish' merchants: a global network moving goods, information, and human trafficking across all trade routes. They were characterized by linguistic fluency and religious adaptability, often labeling themselves by whatever Religious name promoted their political financial interest . An ancient trade "They journey on trade routes by land, partly by sea. Transporting from the West eunuchs, slaves, girls and boys, gold, salt , silk brocade, furs, salt, and swords. The ancient Khazarian are financiers of modern craft . Mafia cabal for technocracy totalitarian planet

Reply