TRUMP'S STATE OF THE UNION: KEY HIGHLIGHTS

US soldiers risk 'hell' if nuclear talks fail – Iranian MP

The warning comes amid President Donald Trump's repeated threats of military action unless Tehran signs a nuclear deal

Upcoming talks on Tehran's nuclear program will decide whether US soldiers "go to hell or return to America," Ebrahim Rezaei, an Iranian MP and spokesman for parliament's National Security and Foreign Policy Committee, has warned.

The remark came as US President Donald Trump ramped up threats of military action unless Iran accepts a deal curbing its nuclear and ballistic missile programs. Indirect talks resumed earlier this month under Oman's mediation, with a third round due in Geneva on Thursday, where Tehran is expected to table a draft agreement. Trump last week set a 15-day deadline for the deal and later said Tehran would face a "very bad day" if it is not reached.

"Thursday's negotiations are a test for Trump and will determine whether American soldiers will go to hell or return to America," Rezaei wrote on X on Sunday.

Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi said earlier that Tehran is ready for military confrontation if diplomacy collapses and would target US bases if attacked. He rejected demands to halt uranium enrichment, calling Iran's nuclear program peaceful and essential for energy security, and stressing its missile program is a "red line" and "strictly non-negotiable."

Earlier, Reuters reported that the Pentagon was preparing for a sustained, weeks-long campaign against Iranian security and nuclear sites if talks failed.

However, Axios and The Wall Street Journal reported this week that General Daniel Caine, chairman of the US Joint Chiefs of Staff and architect of last year's strikes against Iran, warned officials about the risks of a new campaign against Tehran including casualties, strained air defenses, and an overworked force. The Financial Times cited Israeli intelligence officials as saying the US has the military capacity to sustain only four to five days of intense strikes, or about a week at a lower intensity.

Speaking at a weekly briefing on Monday, Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman Esmail Baqaei said any US strike, regardless of scale, would be treated as "an act of aggression" and met with a "ferocious" response.

If Iran gets attacked and decapitated without preempting then Iran had it coming. Only a coward fool would know that a punch is coming but sits there like a duck or a punching bag and takes it. If you see a crush coming, take evasive action.

Iran will fall quicker than house of cards, they cannot withstand american firepower with permeative weapons.

That's what the Americans want you to think, but the reality will be different. Iran has lots of very advanced missiles, including hypersonics, which the US can't defend against. All those US ships will be sitting ducks, as will the US troops in those bases that Iranian missiles can easily reach.

Iran could decimate the US force in a matter of hours if it wanted to. But the US has to rely on F35s to launch missiles and drop bombs – and Iran now has advanced Russian and Chinese missile defence systems. Also, the US has a very limited supply of missiles, having given too many to Ukraine.

Trump has been warned about this, and a lot of Western military experts agree that the US will likely take a beating.

I don't know much directly, yet from what I read; It appears that although Iran is smart to attempt to avoid war, the US and Israel will lose even worse than they did in the twelve-day war if they attack Iran again.

Remember, in a fight, especially a knife fight when you are being struck and hit, you get to strike and hit back.

It's called 'all-out war.'

Iran will fight it for their very survival.

Trump will fight it far from home for his Israeli masters.

Israel will no doubt burn and the US aircraft carrier whose toilets don't work, will be mercifully sunk, unprocessed sailor waste and all.

The military industrial complex's owned by Jewish financiers do not give a damn for the soldiers thrown into combative situations. As long as it does not interfere with their disgusting profits. A sad reality.
