The United States has urged all Americans to leave Iran "immediately," escalating rhetoric against Tehran amid demands for concessions on its uranium enrichment and ballistic missile programs and a major military buildup in the Middle East.

Secretary of State Marco Rubio announced on Friday that Iran had been formally designated a "State Sponsor of Wrongful Detention," accusing the Islamic Republic of holding foreign nationals for political leverage.

"No American should travel to Iran for any reason. We reiterate our call for Americans who are currently in Iran to leave immediately," Rubio said. He warned that further measures could follow, including potential restrictions on the use of US passports for travel to or through Iran.

While US officials portray the move as a response to longstanding grievances dating back to the 1979 hostage crisis, critics note that the announcement coincides with mounting pressure on Tehran over its nuclear program and the possibility of military action if talks collapse.

The warning was issued just as President Donald Trump expressed pessimism about ongoing negotiations with Iran, reiterating that he would not accept any agreement allowing uranium enrichment. "They should make a deal, but they don't want to quite go far enough," he said. "So I'm not happy with the negotiation."

Iran has consistently denied seeking nuclear weapons, insisting its program is for peaceful purposes and subject to international verification. Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi described the latest round of talks in Geneva on Thursday as the "most serious and longest" to date, with "good progress" made on both nuclear restrictions and sanctions relief.

Oman, which has been mediating the talks, also characterized the discussions as constructive. Technical-level meetings are scheduled to resume in Vienna next week.

The timing of Washington's designation has fueled speculation that it may serve to harden public opinion ahead of a possible escalation. The Pentagon has deployed two aircraft carrier strike

Vice President J.D. Vance has sought to reassure Americans that any potential strike would not devolve into another prolonged Middle East conflict. "There is no chance" of a years-long war, he said on Thursday, while cautioning against what he called "overlearning" the lessons of past interventions.

The country that has kept people in prison in Guantanamo for decades without charge or trial, and has kept its own citizens in prison for years without charge or trial (the Jan 6 «rioters»), the country that invaded another country to kidnap a president they didn't like and his wife, is trying to lecture the world on «wrongful detention».

When a PDF's and a r..... in the USA and Israel are deciding about other countries and millions of civilians around the globe. When a bandits are deciding about life or death of the kids in Palestine or in Iran. This is the Sodom and Gomorrah of this world, where powerful people are under illusion that they are above the God. And in fact Trump, late Epstein or any Israeli prime minister do not believe in any religion. Don't be confused, Zionists in Israel are the followers of Idolatry, a sin according to real Judaism and you don't have to be really theologian to see that deliberately killing innocent kids who are waiting in line for water or food is not related to any religion, it is related in cult and violations of basic Commandments that God gave to real Jews, not this fraud in Israel.

Here is the solution to the problem. Russia needs to start acting like a superpower and flex some muscle to prevent this war.

Russia and Iran need to announce that Russia has taken possession of the missing 400 kilos of highly enriched uranium that is still hidden away, probably in a protected corridor under Fordow mountain. These 400 kilos are the real reason that Trump has sent his armada to the area. Iran has already agreed to give up the 400 kilos in exchange for sanctions relief. In fact, Iran had already agreed to this, prior to the attack on them last June. But Trump, with his hands tied by Israel, can't offer sanctions relief because that would strengthen Iran, and end their regime change plan, which has always been the final goal.

Well, if Russia already has possession of the 400 kilos, there is no longer a valid legitimate reason to attack Iran.

Russia should immediately fly a Division of their airborne troops into Tehran airport, along with necessary air defense systems to protect them. The Russians should then drive the 60 miles to the Southwest to Fordow mountain, and occupy the site. The US will not dare to attack Russia.

By getting there first, Russia will prevent the US from attempting to snatch the 400 kilos with a surprise operation, which they are certainly planning right now. It must be assumed that the US and Israeli intelligence already know exactly where the 400 kilos is hidden.

Once Russia has possession of the 400 kilos, they should announce that it would remain right where it is until the US agrees to complete sanctions relief in exchange for the surrender of the enriched uranium. No sanctions relief — no removal of the 400 kilos. Russia can then announce that their Division of Russian troops will remain in Iran until the US backs off with their armada from the region. Russia can easily out- wait the US with it's costly armada. Russia can then take the 400 kilos back to Russia for processing to a lower level, just like they did back in 2015. End of problem!
