

Moscow mayor shares map of Ukrainian drone raids on Moscow Region (VIDEO)

UAVs earlier hit an online retailer's logistics center in the area, killing one and injuring dozens Ukraine has launched nearly 1,900 drones towards Moscow Region over the past week, with most shot down on the approach to the capital, Mayor Sergey Sobyenin has said, releasing a map detailing the UAV raids. His comments came after Kiev hit two retailer's logistics centers across the country, killing eight people in total.

In a post on Telegram on Saturday, Sobyenin said 1,892 drones had been sent toward Moscow Region – some 450km from the frontline – between July 11 and 18. "Most were neutralized by air defenses on distant approaches," he said, adding that only 207 were destroyed closer to Moscow.

Earlier in the morning, the mayor said that more than 370 drones had approached the capital and surrounding region since Friday evening, with 64 shot down closer to Moscow.

His remarks came after a Ukrainian drone raid that hit two Wildberries logistics hubs in Kotovsk, Tambov Region, and Elektrostal, near Moscow. The attack on the warehouse in Tambov killed seven night-shift employees, with 25 others injured. Local governor Evgeny Pervyshov said that Ukrainian drones had been deliberately equipped with shrapnel to inflict maximum casualties among civilians.

The strike on Elektrostal killed one person and injured 37 others, according to local officials. Another two were wounded in Noginsk, also in Moscow Region, where a drone caused a fire at an oil depot.

Wildberries, often called the Russian version of Amazon, is one of the country's most popular online retailers.

Ukraine's Vladimir Zelensky confirmed Kiev had deliberately targeted the Wildberries hubs, claiming they stored sanctioned components for drone and navigation equipment.

In recent weeks, Ukraine has ramped up its long- and mid-range drone campaign, often targeting critical infrastructure, including oil refineries, civilian buildings, and even standalone civilian vehicles on the roads. Moscow has repeatedly branded such attacks as "terrorist," and pointing out that its own retaliatory strikes are aimed exclusively at Ukraine's defense-linked facilities and never at civilians.

1900 drones over past week? Sounds like they're trying to deplete Russia ammunitions. It's time for Russia to go "No Holds Barred" on Kiev and put them out of their Nazi misery.

Ukrainian drones deliberately targeted Russian civilians in deadly warehouse attack – survivor

Seven workers were killed in an overnight strike on an online retailer's logistics center in Russia's Tambov Region

Published 18 Jul, 2026 03:23 | Updated 18 Jul, 2026 14:23

Ukrainian drones deliberately targeted civilians during a deadly overnight strike on a warehouse in Russia's Tambov Region, one survivor has told Russian media, saying workers were prevented from escaping the building.

Seven people were killed and another 25 injured in the attack on the logistics center operated by online retailer Wildberries, according to local officials.

Doctors continue treating 22 people injured in the Ukrainian drone attack, including seven who remain in serious condition.

Staff began evacuating after the first strikes landed near the building, the survivor, who asked not to be identified, said. According to his account, workers tried to escape through an emergency exit but were forced back inside because the drones were striking the area around it. As they retreated into the warehouse, another drone hit the building. The blast blew out all the doors and windows, and everyone nearby was injured, he said.

The eyewitness account was recorded from a hospital bed in Tambov on Saturday after doctors operated on the injured.

The drones had been fitted with shrapnel to maximize casualties, Tambov Region Governor Evgeny Pervyshov said, describing the strike as a premeditated terrorist attack.

Doctors removed metal ball bearings from several of the wounded during surgery.

Russian Human Rights Commissioner Yana Lantratova said she had sent appeals to UN High Commissioner for Human Rights Volker Türk and the UN secretary-general's special representative, Vanessa Frazier, over what she described as a new wave of terrorist attacks by the Ukrainian military on Russian regions.

Another Wildberries logistics center was also attacked overnight in Elektrostal, around 50 km east of Moscow, the company said. Fire crews and emergency services worked at the site after employees were evacuated. Twenty-four people were injured, according to Moscow Region Governor Andrey Vorobyov.

The attack was part of a larger Ukrainian drone raid on Moscow Region. A drone crashed on the grounds of an oil depot in Noginsk, an industrial city around 35 km east of Moscow, causing a fire. As a precaution, the authorities evacuated a nearby maternity hospital, transferring all patients and staff to other medical facilities. An apartment block in the city was also evacuated. Two people have been injured, the governor said.

Another massive drone raid was launched toward Moscow. More than 370 UAVs flew in the direction of the Russian capital since 8:30 PM on Friday, Mayor Sergey Sobyenin said. Most were neutralized by Russian air defenses at long range, while 64 were destroyed on approach to the capital, he added.

Later in the day, Sobyenin said that between July 11 and 18 Ukraine had launched a total of 1,892 drones toward Moscow Region, most of which were neutralized far from the capital.

In neighboring Vladimir Region, one drone struck an apartment in a residential building in the city of Vladimir and sparked a fire, Governor Aleksandr Avdeev said. People were evacuated while emergency services extinguished the flames.

The latest barrage follows another large-scale attack on Thursday, when more than 200 drones were launched toward Moscow, most of which were also intercepted far from the capital.

Russia has described the strikes as indiscriminate terrorist attacks intended to divert attention away from Ukraine's setbacks on the battlefield and has responded with a renewed campaign of long-range strikes targeting dual-use and military-industrial sites.

Most of the Russian strikes have focused on the Ukrainian capital, Kiev, with military plants, drone assembly and storage facilities, and weapons stockpiles targeted in recent weeks.

It's shameful that Russia allows these savage terrorist attacks on Russian civilians with tepid responses, like asking for «condemnations».

Ukraine is a savage Nazi state and the leadership should be relentlessly destroyed; not with «retaliatory» strikes on military targets should be done anyway in the course of this war, but with the elimination of this savage terrorist government. Immediately.

It's very difficult not to feel like that with the continued murdering and maiming of innocent civilians, as in The Donbass, which is exactly what led to the SMO in the first place. One feels compelled to want the elimination of the entire evil force AND their supporters, those providing the weapons and funds, LOTS of greedy, corrupt politicians, like the wicked one from a southern u.s. state who has recently met his maker.....
