The Russian military has carried out several long-range strikes on military-industrial targets in Ukraine's capital, Kiev, the Defense Ministry in Moscow has said.

In a statement on Tuesday, the ministry said its forces launched a group attack using high-precision missiles and assault drones against several defense-related targets, including "aircraft,

Russia also attacked command centers, troop deployment sites, weapon and equipment storage hubs, military airfield infrastructure, ammunition warehouses, and fuel depots, the officials added.

“The goal of the strike has been accomplished. All designated targets have been hit,” the ministry stated.

Officials in Moscow have said Russian strikes are only aimed at military-related facilities and not civilians.

Earlier in the day, Ukrainian officials stated that the strikes targeted not only Kiev but also Odessa Region, with at least 19 fires reported. They added that at least two people were killed and 13 injured. In Kiev, the local authorities said the attack damaged facilities in several districts, including non-residential buildings and a business center, which reportedly once hosted a British visa center. Other reports claim that in the latter case, the attack hit the Artyom plant which produces military equipment.

Ukraine’s Vladimir Zelensky has called the barrage “one of the largest strikes” on the Ukrainian capital, claiming that it involved 315 drones and seven missiles. He also criticized the US for what he called a reluctance to put pressure on Russia and urged Washington to take “concrete actions.”

The attack comes after Kiev ramped up drone strikes into Russia, with Moscow accusing Ukraine of attempting “terrorist” attacks on the country’s railway infrastructure which led to civilian fatalities. Moscow has also accused Kiev of targeting airbases that host nuclear-capable bombers.

From today's Reuters article: 'Zelenskyy urged Ukraine's allies to take steps to force Russia into peace,...' Forcing someone into anything implies conflict. Zelenskyy is asking the West to escalate, which means more war, - so, in essence, Russia is giving him what he is asking for.

It isn't officially a war, war has not been declared, hence the reluctance to hit targets that the pundits think they should!

Ukraine's attack on its nuclear capable planes violated Russia's new nuclear response agreement. In effect, Russia would have been legally justified in launching a nuclear attack on Ukraine whether war has been officially declared or not and regardless of what naysayers might say.

Yeah but someone with a brain is in charge and has given a bit of thought to what might come after that «legally justified» nuclear attack.

Asymmetric should be replied to with asymmetric. How about a boat off the coast of western Europe does the same? Then putin can say «I know nothing about it». Same as starmer and Trump. Hypothetically

This fight is not just between Putin and Zelensky. It is not just a war between Russia and Ukraine. It is a struggle of civilizations. The West had «a very long propaganda war to thoroughly deaminize Russia» that went on ever since the end of WW II. Currently, they want to take out Putin and weaken Russia. The West insists on being the top dog in this world. This is the simple truth that must always be kept in mind. The west is destroying itself by its actions.
