

العربية ESP PYC DE FR RS ИНО TV RTA RUPTLY RT Academy Where to watch Schedule RT News App

RT QUESTION MORE  Kiev needs nukes as security guarantee – Zelensky | Russia-Ukraine summit

Russia & Former Soviet Union World News Business India Africa RT Analysis Opinion Entertainment Shows Projects
Features

/ Home / World News

Battle for Hungary: EU attacks on Orban are a sign of worse things to come

Brussels ‘elites’ are displaying an unbroken will to power over what we are allowed to think, say, and vote for

Published 28 Mar, 2026 14:29 | Updated 28 Mar, 2026 15:30

By Tarik Cyril Amar, a historian from Germany working at Koç University, Istanbul, on Russia, Ukraine, and Eastern Europe, the history of World War II, the cultural Cold War, and the politics of @tarikcyrilamar

tarikcyrilamar.substack.com

tarikcyrilamar.com

Top stories

Trump threatens Iran with more destruction, claims peace deal is near

Iranian ambassador to Russia dismisses Trump’s claims about talks

EXCLUSIVE

Attack on Kuwait plant highlights Middle East’s critical vulnerability memory

About a century ago – between those two World Wars which Europeans have generously given to the history of humanity – there was a joke about Hungary: It was a monarchy without a king and a landlocked country ruled by an admiral. It was funny because it was true.

Nowadays, though, we have proudly advanced. Now, we have a whole European Union, with 27 member states and 450 million people, run by an unelected German who really serves the US and has, a bit like Siegfried or Brunhilde, a special “shield” (about which more below) to protect a “democracy” administered and defined by an non-transparent, privileged, and aloof nomenklatura of equally unelected bureaucrats.

Contemporary Hungary, meanwhile, is, by the sober standards of reality, by no means a perfect but a perfectly normal country, that is, neither better nor worse than most of the rest. No longer a weird monarchy with a gaping hole at the top but a run-of-the-mill Western-style capitalist democracy, it has a feisty prime minister for a leader instead of an admiral without a coast. That prime minister, Viktor Orban, is a typical if especially canny and successful professional politician, who combines a knack for crowd appeal,

EXPLAINER

US prosecution ‘has nothing’ on Venezuelan president – Maduro’s son EXCLUSIVE

What damage has Iran inflicted on US military bases? EXPLAINER

Moscow expels UK diplomat for spying

Russian tanker bypasses US oil blockade of Cuba

Subscribe to RT newsletter to get news highlights of the day right in your mailbox

E-mail

We offer you the possibility to receive RT's news highlights every Monday, Wednesday and Friday by email.

demagoguery included, with deft political power plays.

It is true, if electoral districts need re-designing in Hungary, the party in power is likely to favor its own chances, just like they do in the EU's big "daddy" the US, for instance. Likewise, if you are doing business in Hungary, being close to the party – or parties – in power tends to be better for your company. But that's no different in, again, the US (with the caveat that there the current president and his extensive clan are now taking an extra large cut for themselves). Or, indeed, in Germany and France. The latter, as it happens, has just reached a new low in Transparency International's annual corruption index.

Hungary may not have unbiased mass media, as its critics indignantly charge. But then, who does? Certainly not Germany, Britain, France, or, for that matter, the US. As a matter of fact, it is the EU and the German authorities which are currently obstinately misusing a sanctions regime designed for foreign policy purposes – and not working, but that's another matter – to circumvent ordinary legal procedures, trample on civil and human rights, and punitively destroy the existence of individual dissidents and critical journalist.

Hungary's elections may suffer from that media slant and some sharp administrative practice, too. But that again, is at least equally true of all major states in Europe and of the US as well. Indeed, say what you will about voting under real-existing Orbanism, it has not featured the

Subscribe

RT Features

Is East Asia entering a missile age? Japan, South Korea, and Taiwan rearm FEATURE

Another setback for Kiev: Ukraine's spring push stalls amid Russian brutal, EU-driven manipulation we have recently seen in Romania and Moldova.

Read more: Battle for Hungary: How the EU plans to defeat Viktor Orban

And there is also nothing comparable in Orban’s Hungary to the extremely suspicious (to say the least) manner in which the last German elections featured a statistically bizarre accumulation of “mistakes” that eliminated the New-Left BSW from parliament.

Since it seems likely that a correct – or clean – result would make Germany’s current ruling coalition impossible, the implications of this case of deeply flawed elections at the very center of the EU are most disturbing: at this point, Germany may have an electorally baseless government, the German parliament’s refusal to permit a clearly necessary recount is either more foul play or indistinguishable from it, and Berlin’s political course – domestically and abroad – would be principally different under a government that would have to rely on the correct election results.

And let’s not even mention minor details, such as that Hungary’s mixed election system (combining first-past-the-post districts and national party lists) is far more representative than that of that “cradle of parliamentary democracy” and police-state-for-Zionism Great Britain.

In view of the above, you would expect, if anything, Budapest going after Brussels as well as some other individual EU member states to demand better democratic behavior. But this is the alternative-reality world of the EU’s sectarian “elite,” where genocidal Israel is only defending itself, “Europe is the values of the Talmud” (perish the thought its history may have a little more to do with first Christian and then Enlightenment ideas), the US is a good and

gains FEATURE

Thousands of missiles later: Why the Gulf still won’t go to war with Iran FEATURE

Podcasts

All podcasts

 NCHYZ FECT
with Bill Sanchez

‘Hasn’t Trump said that he is going for regime change, and he is not talking to us?’ – Iranian Ambassador to Russia

0:00  38:26

 EAST WEST
with Ogi and Sara

Surviving Israeli missile strike, Lebanon battle & UK press freedom with Steve Sweeney reliable ally, and four white, blonde women serving the same radical Centrism proudly constitute “diversity.”

0:00  36:52

Hence, in topsy-turvy land, it is, obviously, once again the EU that is charging Hungary with flunking the test of “democracy.” That, in and of itself, might not be important: words are cheap. The problem is that, as before in Romania and even Moldova – not even a member state – the EU Commission has long passed from mere talk, at which it excels, to mean action, which makes everything only worse. Indeed, the EU’s meddling in Hungary has recently escalated.

The catalyst for this escalation is the upcoming Hungarian election. To be held on April 12, domestically, back in Hungary, the outcome will merely decide if Orban can stay in power – which he has been without interruption since 2010 – or will be replaced by the opposition’s new hope, Peter Magyar, a former Orbanist himself. Yet there are good reasons Politico has called these “the EU’s most important elections” this year despite the fact that Hungary is a small country of less than 10 million citizens.

Read more: Battle for Hungary: How the Russiagate blueprint has

For one thing, Orban is the primus inter pares of a group of very inconvenient sovereigntist rebels inside the EU, which also includes Slovakia’s leader Robert Fico, the Czech Republic’s Andrej Babis and, occasionally but with special weight, Bart de Wever from Belgium, which is an EU founding member. Orban’s toppling would not only weaken this been unleashed against Orban loose group of leaders that still remember that they are supposed to serve their countries first but also make for a chilling object lesson in what happens to those frustrating Brussels too much.

Especially, if they resist the Commission party line on three topics: the relationship with Russia, the Western – now entirely EU-financed – proxy war waged against Moscow by means of Ukraine, and, last but not least, money, in particular money to be wasted – or not – on Kiev's Zelensky regime. In all three areas, Orban has been Brussel's main irritant, consistently arguing for normalization with Russia through diplomacy, a quick negotiated end to the proxy war, and an end also to the pathological inter-dependence with Zelensky's ultra-corrupt and extremely dangerous regime.

Recently, this Hungarian resistance has led to repeated clashes with both the EU establishment and Kiev. Zelensky has publicly threatened Orban with violence in the worst Mafia style; Budapest has taken action against extremely suspicious transports of tens of millions of euro and dollars as well as bullion to Kiev; Hungary and Ukraine have been sparring over Kiev's attempts to block the Druzhba pipeline; Budapest has been blocking yet another massive "loan" (never to be paid back) for Zelensky and his crew, and, most recently, Orban has called on Kiev to immediately withdraw its agents and operatives from Hungary.

And, by the way, you may suspect Orban of seeking an electoral boost. But even if that is the case, it makes no difference to the fact that aggressive subversion is exactly what the Zelensky regime does. Ask the Germans how things with their pipelines went. The braver ones might dare answer.

As we live in modern, online times, the shape much of the escalating EU meddling on the side of Orban's opponents in Budapest and Kiev has taken is a nasty combination of social media manipulation at scale, illicit surveillance and spying, and the targeted dissemination of what is meant to be compromising information.

A smelly affair features a Hungarian journalist who has produced a source-free report alleging massive Russian interference in the elections, while spending his free time facilitating an EU country's intelligence service eavesdropping on Hungary's foreign minister. Some interference indeed. The hypocrisy would be funny if it weren't so sad.

In Brussels, meanwhile, under the overall umbrella of the "European Democracy Shield" (EDS) initiative and the Digital Services Act (DSA), a so-called Rapid Response mechanism has been activated to – so the official brief tell us – combat disinformation and foreign influence. Yet, in reality, this is a set of compulsory measures that permit the Commission's dependent auxiliaries to police social media platforms, suppress content in favor of Orban and, thus, promote his rivals.

What makes all of this particularly dreadful is not simply that it is so almost comically Orwellian: The "European Democracy Shield" is really a shield to protect the EU's unelected bureaucrat rulers and their ideologized technocrats from democracy as a recent report has correctly argued. Its tools, from so-called “fact-checking” to systematic denunciation by “trusted flaggers” to “prebunking” – that is AI-based preventative propaganda campaigns – amount to a box of horrors. The Ukraine connection

Read more: Battle for Hungary:

Yet what is even worse is that all of this is only a small part of a much larger and long-term strategy that has been gathering steam for a decade already. The “European Democracy Shield” and the DSA exist in a large, constantly pullulating eco-system of narrative control that also includes, for instance, a “Defense of Democracy Package,” a “European Democracy Action Plan,” and a Digital Markets Act. Attached to this weaponized spearhead for manufacturing Brussels consent is an extensive – and very expensive – train of so-called civil-society organizations and NGOs that provide both censorship assistance and indoctrination.

Hungary, put simply, is a harbinger of more and even worse to come, of what Brussels wants for our future. The EU ‘elites’ are displaying an unbroken will to power over what we are allowed to think, say, and vote for. That is why – whether you like or dislike Viktor Orban – and I heartily dislike him because of his outrageous siding with genocidal Israel – you should certainly greatly dislike and resist the methods that the EU is fielding to stop him. Because they are coming for all of us.

The statements, views and opinions expressed in this column are solely those of the author and do not necessarily represent those of RT.

OPINION

You can share this story on social media:

Follow RT on

European Union – EU, Hungary, Viktor Orban

Please check our commenting policy. If you have questions or suggestions feel free to send them to feedback@rttv.ru.

AA B i “ <> ☰ ☰

Your comment here

Sign In ▾

Sort by Recently updated ▾

RL RL L 3/31/2026 at 12:31 PM 0

When countries are part of a bloc, it shows that they feel a need for the idea that there is strength in numbers and are therefore forfeiting parts of their sovereignty for it...membership fee so to speak but how wrong they are....

Reply

E Enrique Costas 3/30/2026 at 8:56 PM 0

At least Hungary and Slovakia will enjoy cheap energy in three months while Germany will have to close factories because the traitors in Government are destroying the German industry, and have decided to cede for free their market share in the 150 million Russian market, a market share built for over 30 years with the hard work of German corporations and former German Governments of Helmut Khol and Gerhard Schroeder (who were much clever than idiots like Merkel, Scholz and Merz), to China.

Reply

 John V Asia Teacher 3/30/2026 at 1:20 PM

1

Then leave the EU, Hungary!

Reply

 SaysTheBronxBoy 3/30/2026 at 9:41 AM

1

Orban/Trump?

Lets See if The Donald truly lives on a Handshake, n loyalty..!

Says The BronxBoy

Reply

 Srinivas Injeti 3/30/2026 at 9:31 AM

2

If the Hungarians wish to be independent they will vote for Orban. If they want to become slaves, they will not vote for Orban.

Reply

 John J 3/29/2026 at 1:50 AM

8

Any country that surrenders to the EU/US Cabal will become a slave. Fight with all you got.

Reply

 b keegan 3/30/2026 at 8:33 AM ↑

2

You can look at countries who were «absorbed» in to the EU just to have them. Romania and Bulgaria fir example were better under the Communists. They are dull dead places now with «trained» zombies walking the streets. Nobody wabts property in either and buikding are fslling apart. The EU with their support for stupid wars have lumbered millions of immigrants on countries. Ireland and Britain are infested with them including rapists murderers and spongers living off the natives.

Reply

Covert 3/28/2026 at 9:33 PM

10

At least Orban isn't backing down. I admire that. Fico even took bullets and didn't quit. Great leaders these guys 👍

Reply

Tyrone 3/29/2026 at 12:40 AM ↕

-2

Yeah but an Orban nuance has become an irritant in general is impossible to miss. Whenever Russian military hammers Uke Nazis. Orban always distracts it by diversion, and rallies up calls by NATO members to help Ukraine: Sympathy. By expression: Oh Ukraine won't last 1 month, or Ukraine this and that is garbage talk to consume and absorb the narrative by taking it for a walk to the 5hithouse. Therefore diverting the fact of thousands of NATO Uke Nazis getting beautifully denazified gets buried in his garbage opinion and never touches the Hungarian problem of being a NATO member. The obligations are obvious and so are the invisible shackles and chains that chain the slaves/people. Fake narratives, Fake slogans and Fake marches by Hungarian scuumbags is what they deserve (up and incoming) to be ripped to shreds.

Fico. Another controlled actor and asset of his Nazimeriicunt masters. Obviously couldn't pull it over Putin's head by begging for gas Re-routing didn't yield anything substantial. You see you get a better picture when you see the CIA rogue's hit squad list was Fico, Erdogan, Vucic and before Fico was a botched failed attempt on Kobakhidhe which the Russian muscle shut down. Fico was basically a distraction (insecure soft target) from Georgia being the target, and the attempts on Erdogan and Vuccic were disabled. Overall it was just an operation full of NATO garbage designed to raise political paranoia by CIA to use as an up and coming gas leverage over Russia. But all the selected actors are garbage to begin with besides the Georgian with backbone. Vuccic unfortunately for my love of Serbians, by his unlearned mistakes: Serbian weapons supply – landed himself in the CIA garbage bin. It's not for nothing why he took a trip to Moscow afterwards: Renew his Russian Orthodox vowels or end up dead as Jewish Nazi scuum. From a Personal Security Probing point of view, looks like Fico was the only one out of the lot without Russian Muscle.

Reply

Covert 3/29/2026 at 8:46 PM ↑

2

Regardless he took some slugs for the cause. I realise there is much more to the hidden agenda, and architecture of it all

Reply

b keegan 3/30/2026 at 8:22 AM ↑

2

Orban is elected his enemies are not.

Reply

Blood Witch 3/30/2026 at 4:55 AM Blocked

0

This comment was deleted

Reply

b keegan 3/30/2026 at 8:21 AM ↑

2

«A respected member» . What the hell is that? A idiot wgo blindly obeys the orders of a unelcted bubch of clowns who have reduced the living